city, and an organization was effected, known as the Mount Vernon Avenue Association, which was chartered by the legislature of Virginia February 1, 1888 As a further evidence of the claim held by the State against the general government for $120,000, which sum was advanced by the State of Virginia in 1790, and used by the government in the construction of the first public buildings erected at Washington.

In 1889 an appropriation of $10,000 was voted by Congress for the purpose of making surveys, ascertaing the cost and the feasibility of the government's endorsement of the proposed memorial highway. Col. Peter C. Hains was detailed by the Secretary of War to make the necessary surveys, After com-pleting his work, Colonel Hains, in submitting his report, highly endorsed the carrying out the proposition of the Mount Vernon Avenue Association. Secretary Endicott, in his report to Congress on the subject, also endorsed the matter. This report was presented to Congress in 1890, but no definite action was taken by that body looking to the construction of the memorial high-

The report of the Secretary of War was that the minimum cost of the highway would be $1,200,000, and the maximum $2,000,000. This provided four the building of the grandest boulevard in the world, communicating at the south end of the proposed memorial south end of the proposed memorial bridge (across the Potomac from New York avenue to Arlington thence to Alexandria, and across Hunting Creek, a branch of the Potomac, on a pro-posed memorial bridge to be construced in honor of Lafayette, De Kalb, Rochambeau, and other foreign officials who aided the United States revolution-
